WEDNESDAY, JANUARY 18.

A Constitutional Ouestion.

A case came up in the Supreme Court in Banco on Monday last, which possesses consider-contracted after the promulgation of this Act, for spirituous liquors sold, or furnished to any person, by any licensed retail dealer in such liquors, shall be maintained in any court of this Kingdom."

The case before the Court was one in which the parties had had dealings together for a considerable length of time as landlord and tenant, and at the death of the latter, and the settlement of his estate, the accounts showed a balance against the landlord, for sundries furnished him by the tenant, who was a licensed retail dealer in brief the arguments of counsel.

Mr. R. H. Stanley, for the administrators of the estate, argued that the Act to prohibit the maintenance of suits for the recovery of debts contracted in public houses, was calculated to lead to absurd consequences, and was manifestly contradictory to common sense and justice. The only thing that could be said for it was that it was a concession to public feeling, but in this there was danger of shipwreck of the Constitution. Government grants a person a license to sell spirits for $1,000 cash, guarantees him the right and privilege to do so, and then in the same breath deprives him of the right to collect the pay for what it gives him the right to sell. | dlers to mind their own business. This is clearly contrary to common right and reason, and common law adjudges it void. This law, being in restraint of trade, is therefore unconstitutional. By the license permission or authority is given to do a particular thing, in this case to sell spirituous liquors. When a right or privilege is granted, all that is necessary to the enjoyment of that right or privilege goes with it. What enjoyment can there be if your accounts are repudiated by the operation of an unconstitutional Act,-the Government saying,-if you do sell under the license we have granted to you and for which you have paid $1,000, you shall not collect any debts contracted under it ; our courts are barred to you. What but an empty form, conveying nothing, is the privilege of selling, or what use of selling if you cannot collect what France against Germany; second, diplomatic surshall become due through the courts? The right of port given to Prince Napoleon in his intrigues sale carries with it the right of getting pay for what against Germans in France; and last, the consent is sold. Government takes a valuable consideration, guarantees the right to sell, and then takes away the Spain. Bismarck compares this last with the right of collection. The law of '65 is radically inconsistent with and in contravention of the license Act; it is contrary to the principles of right, reason and justice; it is unconstitutional and void. It takes away a vested right. It is manifestly contrary to the first principles of civil liberty, natural justice, and the spirit of the Constitution and laws, that any one citizen should enjoy privileges and advantages which are denied to others under like circumstances, or that any one should be subject to losses or damage, from which all others, under like circumwhen his use and enjoyment of it are interdicted. This law is contrary to the first principles of the Bill of Rights, and a wrongful exercise of Legislative Authority under Article 48 of the Constitution. The England has been signed by the President. Legislature erred in its judgment in passing this law, and it is for the Court to say that the Act is inconsistent with the abstract principles of natural justice. The unconstitutionality of the Act consists in the obviously broad and exclusive distinction-in

Mr. W. C. Jones, for plaintiff, in reply, after same time the weight of cocoons produced had fallen account for rent certain and an illegal and immoral Here was, indeed, a case of sufficient gravity to account, contended for the constitutionality of the justify the employment of the very best means in a Act of 1865 on the ground of policy. It is the duty search for the causes and for a remedy. Owing to of all governments to protect society, pass laws for the black spots by which it manifests its existence, the suppression of vice and crime, to arrest imconsists in the presence of an infinite number of morality and to prohibit immoral practices and pursuits. The Legislative power is not limited or re- interior of the worm. They swarm to such an exstricted by the Constitution promulgated on the 20th tent as to leave no room for the secretion of the fluid of August, 1864. They not only have the power, thousands; but it has been remarked that many of

but it is their duty to protect the community against them, prompted by instinct, go through the movements of spinning, although they have not a particle of silk to produce. Pasteur's inquiry led him to be able to predict what would take place with certain parcels of eggs of which he knew the history; he encourages drunkenness, vice and crime, and rapidly demoralizes the victims of intemperate habits. The lemoralizes the victims of intemperate habits. The Legislature has the power to wholly prohibit the sale of ardent spirits, and they have certainly the right to restrict it. The law approved on the 10th of January, 1865, only prohibits the collection of debts contracted for spirituous liquors, sold after that date, by retail dealers. That is a restriction only, and a wise restriction. A man who took a license after that date and sold on credit, cannot complain. He engaged in a traffic which he knew was restricted by law and he should have adopted the cash system. He should have demanded money at the counter for every glass sold, and not let the victim of intemperance heedlessly contract debts that might impoverish and ruin him and bring his wife and children to want. The object of the law was to prevent this state of things. The testator, in this case, knew when he took out his license in 1867 the existence o: that restrictory law, and he had no right to complain. When a man knowingly disregards and violates the provisions of a law, he should not mur-

The Supreme Court of this Kingdom has held in the case of Rex vs. Booth, (2 Haw. Rep. p.) that the law prohibiting the sale of spirits to natives is constitutional, and surely a law restricting and regulating the sale, so far as to make it a cash business, is no violation of the Constitution.

It has been said that it would be unconstitutional to pass a law prohibiting a grocer and provision dealer from recovering his debts for articles sold at retail. The cases are not analogous; but they would be, provided such grocer or provision dealer sold poisons, calculated to destroy both body and mind. If they dealt in such pernicious poisons, and were scattering disease and death and moral turpitude around, it would not only be constitutional, but the duty of the Legislature to pass a law restricting such traffic, or entirely prohibiting it. Spirituous liquors are a poison of the most deleterious kind, and it is not only the right but the bounden duty of the Legislature to pass laws to prohibit or restrict their sale. I deem the question too clear to admit of

The Court, after hearing the foregoing arguments and the authorities cited by counsel, took the case under advisement.

The News.

We give pretty full extracts of telegraphic dispatches received from various quarters. It is, however, extremely difficult to arrive at any settled conclusion as to the real situation of affairs in France. Both parties to the war, which has evidently arrived at a desperate stage, seem equally inclined to hide the truth and to publish falsehoods. Between the conflicting reports, newspapers get deceived and the public mystified. In one dispatch we are told that Paris is in an excellent condition to maintain a seige; that the French people have high hopes of soon driving the invader from the soil which he desecrates; and in the next breath the whole is flatly contradicted, and the Germans are represented as creepable interest, involving as it does a question as ing nearer and nearer to the doomed city preparto the constitutionality of a statute law. The proposed conference on the Eastern question has met with a check. France was invited spirituous liquors. The former pleaded the above to be present, by her delegate, but positively dequoted statute in bar of the claim. We give in clines to do so unless she is first recognized as a Republic. Now for the other powers to proceed without ber to patch up and amend old European treaties, would seem an anomaly, but the other powers will not consent to the Republic. It is a pretty quarrel as it stands. The conference was to meet January 3d.

It is reported that there is a deep laid conspiracy of Republicans in Madrid, who are sworn to do any desperate deed for their cause. Meantime, Prussia, while holding France in the death struggle, finds time to tell Italy that she has given offense to Germany since the war commenced, in three different ways. First, in permitting her armed subjects to join given to Prince Amadeus' accepting the crown of candidature of Prince Hobenzollern, which caused apprehensions for the balance of European power, and says : " the same peril might exist with the Italian influence, especially as that influence is nearly established both in Portugal and France. where the King of Italy has family connections."
